Share Your Passion through Parks and Recreation

Parks & Recreation is seeking proposals for new program ideas

City of Nanaimo Parks and Recreation is searching for new program ideas and instructors for the Fall/Winter Activity Guide. New instructors and community partners are being sought to offer an enhanced selection of programs including dance, cooking, language, arts, crafts, music, outdoor recreation and fitness classes along with excursions and other experiences to Nanaimo residents.

"Some of the most unique and interesting programs we have offered are a direct result of the program proposal process" said Megan Lum, Recreation Coordinator.

Megan has been a part of this process for several years and works with a variety of instructors and community groups. She invites those interested to share their passion and skill set with the broader community.

"We hope to keep up with new trends and are looking for program offerings for all ages and interests." added Megan, "We welcome creativity, so don't hesitate to submit an idea."

Those who may be interested are asked to read through the Frequently Asked Questions (FAQ) sheet and review the current Activity Guide before submission to avoid duplication of currently scheduled classes. Once these two documents have been reviewed, please complete our online form (linked below), and email a current resume and copies of any relevant awards/certifications to program.proposal@nanaimo.ca by 4:30 pm April 6, 2018.
