Maffeo Sutton Inclusive Playground Opens

Summary

The Maffeo Sutton Inclusive Playground opened on Thursday, June 18. The project, a partnership between The City of Nanaimo, Children's Health Foundation of Vancouver Island, Nanaimo Child Development Centre, Tire Stewardship of BC and other community organizations, brought Nanaimo's first inclusive playground to reality.

The newly installed equipment is not only inclusive for all members of the community, but it will help to improve motor, cognitive and social skills through active play.

As part of the improvements, the playground got improved safety surfacing made out of recycled tires, as well as the pea gravel being replaced with wood fibre. Both of these surfaces not only improve safety but allow those with mobility challenges easier and improved access throughout the area.

Another exciting feature of the playground includes First Nations art pieces created by local artist, Noel Brown. Through his art and the design of the space, a story unfold that depicts life along the Millstone River with Coho salmon.

This is Phase 1 of the playground project with Phase 2 expected in 2023.

Strategic Link: Providing enhancements to our play spaces supports a livable community.

Universal design is the design of buildings, structures or environments that are accessible to all people regardless of age, ability or other factors.
- There are several phases to the overall playground project at Maffeo Sutton Park. Phase Two (coming in 2023) will feature additional play equipment, musical and audible play, sensory panels, quiet play spaces and additional planted areas.
