City of Nanaimo unveils eye-catching, large-scale sculpture in Old City Quarter

David Martinello's new sculpture, Compelling Agency, is an intriguing addition to the City's Temporary Public Art Program

Summary

The City of Nanaimo is thrilled to unveil Compelling Agency, commissioned from regional artist David Martinello for Nanaimo's Temporary Public Art Program. Located at the heart of Old City Quarter adjacent to the intersection of Wallace and Fitzwilliam Streets, Compelling Agency is an eye-catching, large-scale sculpture constructed of metal and wood. The strength and striking form of the sculpture is intended to resonate with viewers. Fashioned in the silhouette of a tree, its shape and colour relates to the natural growth of the park. Suspended within the frame is a slab of cedar; a focal-point which prompts conversation about a natural resource that's ever-present in our daily lives.

Martinello's intent with Compelling Agency is to draw a viewer's attention to the relationship that humans have with wood and, over time, their relationship with the environment as they observe the natural weathering and evolution of the sculpture during its years on display.

Considering the influence of wood as a material, Compelling Agency behaves as a measure and reflection of our landscape. Our emotive connection to wood's essence is highlighted in the framing of this resource; its value appraised as being integral to the framework of our lives. Compelling Agency stands symbolically for an evolving habitat while speaking to life in Nanaimo.

An artist talk with David Martinello will take place at 1:00 pm on Saturday, December 2nd at the site of the artist's sculpture as part of Nanaimo Artwalk 2023. Compelling Agency will be on display through 2027. Information on the City of Nanaimo's Temporary Art Program can be found on the Temporary Public Art page of the City's website.

Quotes

"Our public art is a wonderful reflection of place and community – free and accessible to all. We welcome this magnificent addition by a talented artist to our public art program."

Leonard Krog
Mayor
City of Nanaimo

"My approach to art is based on an experience we all can relate to, admiring the breadth of a tree and picking up a stick to inspect its beauty. Ever since I was a toddler the inspired nature of this action is something that has occupied my attention. As an artist and furniture maker I've spent years considering why it does. Compelling Agency frames and celebrates this experience in a form that, with pride, will be fostered during its time in Nanaimo."
