

A Fight For Love by Emma Dupere

A friendship blossoming between times,
A love growing through a stitch,
Two kids lost in time, and love,
Pulled apart by a haunting mystery

Yet in all things, Fate is a funny thing
What seems like loss, she seems found
Where a question lies, she brings an answer
An answer that brought two adults together again

One suffered loss, burdened by guilt over her questions
One shrouds himself in mystery, to hide his past

Yet Fate binds them together,
A ghostly mystery pushing them to see
Pushing them to feel

Where anger and sadness was,
Became love and passion
A haunting, murder, even time could not see them part
Forever bound together by a stitch in time

This poem is inspired by the novel A Stitch in Time by Kelly Armstrong